

Your projects, and the leftover copies

10 October 2026. Read from your live board just now. 21 real projects. The new names are suggestions in one pattern, who it is for, then what it is. Nothing is renamed until you say.

The leftover copies

17 records: the 16 run together copies in the last column above, plus the LOVC stub, which says itself that it is only another name for Laurel Oaks. Each copy says the same thing as its real project. The board already ignores them. The plan, if you say yes: copy all 17 into a backup list in your data, check the backup, then delete the 17. The 21 real projects are not touched.

Worth knowing

Five of the 21 are personal. Anyone with the board's link sees them alongside client work. Moving them off the studio list, or hiding them from Gavin and Grace, is part of the team view still to build. A rename is saved on the project. The nightly rewrites projects each morning; it has kept the names so far, but I will check the morning after.
